

Apprentice and Trainee Re-engagement Register

If you are an apprentice or trainee and have recently lost your job you can sign up to the Apprentice and Trainee Re-engagement Register and connect with prospective employers to explore ongoing work.

The register enables apprentices and trainees who were in a training contract with a small business at March 1 to upload their details, including resumes, and will be promoted to employers and Group Training Organisations across our networks.

If you are an employer or Group Training Organisation looking to employ an apprentice or trainee you can register your details and post a vacancy.

Employers, of any size, who re-engage eligible apprentices or trainees displaced from a small business may be eligible for a wage subsidy of 50 per cent of the apprentice's or trainee's wage (up to $7,000 per quarter), under the Australian Government's Supporting Apprentices and Trainees initiative.

The register is hosted by the National Apprentice Employment Network (NAEN) and supported by the Australian Government, as part of the economic response to the coronavirus.
